

Lotus table

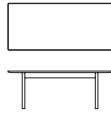

This table, the tabletop was designed with a rim resembling a lotus leaf. In order to create the rim, the surface of tabletop was carved, leaving the outer side of the smooth tabletop so that it is slightly raised outward. The appearance has a Japanese atmosphere, as of a lotus leaf oating in a pond. The table legs are streamlined like airplane wings, in order to hide their existence as much as possible. The legs were nished to form a line on the cut end surface, while the centre part bulges out.

Our basic idea of furniture is an element, next to the things that form a space, such as doors, walls and ceilings. Furniture is a basis of life and changes the quality of living space.
