

Museum cabinet for pray

This open-style piece is a new addition to the museum cabinet for private collection series, first introduced in 2015. As its name suggests, it is designed as an altar or a place for quiet reflection. The frame and legs, slimmer than before, are adorned with a gentle outward curve and tama-buchi edge molding, creating a serene and solemn presence that evokes Japanese and oriental aesthetics, offering a space where objects of reverence can be displayed with grace.
